A close-up photograph of a ruler with a red wax seal. The ruler is marked in inches, with the numbers 140 and 145 visible. A piece of light-colored paper is placed against the ruler, and a red wax seal is applied to it. The seal is a thick, irregular band of red wax, partially covering the paper and the ruler. The background is dark and out of focus.
